CLUBS' ACTIVITIES CLOSE

DEEP COVE, April 23.—The Deep Cove Social Club brought the season's activities to a delightful close on Friday evening when the club hall was the scene of one of the most enjoyable dances of the year.

There was a large attendance and Mr. Howard Robinson, of Elk Lake, and Mrs. Gleason, of Victoria, who supplied excellent music for the dancing, responded to the many encores in a very efficient manner. Several novelty dances were introduced and were received with great enthusiasm by the dancers. During the evening there were 12 tumbler prizes drawn for the winners of the same being presented with the prizes by Mrs. O. Thomas.

Miss May Copithorne was busy selling tickets for a raffle, the prize being a beautiful tea-cloth, presented to the club by Miss Maude Horth. The proceeds of the raffle are to be used for the purpose of buying a flag for the club hall. The winner of the tea-cloth was Miss Annie Bull, of Royal Oak.

The delicious supper was served at prettily-decorated tables by Mrs. A. Calvert, Miss M. Horth and Mrs. J. Peck. The music for the supper dances was very kindly supplied by Mrs. Geo. McLean and Mr. Raymond Brethour.

The president, Capt. E. Livesey, acted as master of ceremonies and great credit is due the committee for the excellent way in which the dance was carried out.

This dance brought to a conclusion a very successful year, and great credit is due the president, Capt. Livesey; the secretary, Mr. Alan Calvert; the ladies' committee and the directors of the club.

MUSICAL ENTERTAINMENT

GALIANO, April 23.—Mrs. Alfred Cayzer entertained at her home the mothers of her music pupils and her Bible class on Saturday to a delightful musical program. "The Chimes," by Edwin Morgan; "Dancing Fairies" and "Tik-Tak," two songs, by Rosamond Murcheson, were given. Allan Steward, Nigel Morgan and Miss York played several pieces and showed marked improvement, the Hungarian dance by Miss York being delightfully rendered. Jack Page recited in his usual amusing way, being greatly appreciated. "You Must Not!"—a humorous song, was given by Nigel and Edwin. Barbara Twiss and Rosamond Murcheson as two little maids in sunbonnets and pinafores, sang sweetly, "I Don't Want to Play in Your Yard," and as Japanese in kimonos they delighted everyone with "Two Little Maids from Japan."

A dainty tea was served by the hostess, assisted by her daughter, Mrs. Page. Those present were Mrs. Radford, Mrs. Twiss, Mrs. Steward, Mrs. Morgan and Mrs. Murcheson.

Miss Jones—Yes, he remarked about that too.

FEEDING HEN-HATCHED CHICKS

By PROF. E. M. STRAIGHT

When not to feed:—Chicks should not be fed until they are at least 48 hours old. Sand and clean water should be before them from the start.

When to feed:—Feed at 7 a.m., 3 p.m. and 6.30 p.m. for first week.

What to feed:—

Commercial chick food 70 per cent and poultry scratch 30 per cent will make a good mixture for the baby chicks and the mother. Do not over-feed during the first week. Keep everything clean, change sand and water often. The second week give chick feed in the morning. Place dry mash in tins out of reach of the hen, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Remove the mash from the house at 3 o'clock, so that the birds will be hungry for the last feed at night. For the last feed give chick food. For the second week charcoal, chick size, should be before the birds. For the third week the feeding should be the same, except that fine bone and grit should be supplied. Hen should be removed from the chicks at about eight weeks, and chicks provided with perches. Keep record of costs. Do not forget to dust hen with insect powder. Watch out for red mites. Use creosote on perches and around nests and cracks of house. Success is not possible in a dirty house.

Mr. Mounce, of the Mounce Feed Co., has kindly offered to supply each boy and girl, who entered the school contest, with sufficient food to tide the chicks over the baby period.

VARIOUS THEFTS AT FULFORD

FULFORD HARBOUR, April 23.—Various thefts which have been committed from time to time amongst certain boats here developed into an all round robbery on Easter Monday at about midnight, the thieves having broken into Mr. Patterson's warehouses at the local wharf and stolen a quantity of groceries. Mr. Patterson has several times lately lost bales of hay as well. Mr. T. M. Jackson's house was also robbed and not contented with this, the robbers helped themselves to some 15 gallons of gasoline from Mr. Hamilton's launch, after which they left the harbour in their gasboat. The police now have the matter well in hand.

CATHOLIC LADIES' 500 DRIVE

FULFORD HARBOUR, April 23.—The Catholic Ladies' Altar Society held a very enjoyable 500 drive on Easter Monday. The prize-winners were: Ladies—First, Miss Rogers; second, Miss Nina Reynolds. Men—First, Mr. Fred Morris; second, Mr. Frank Downey. The consolation prizes were won by Miss Gladys Shaw and Mr. Shaw. The local orchestra supplied the music for the dance which followed.

CARD PARTY

DEEP COVE, April 23.—The Deep Cove Social Club held their usual weekly card game in the club hall on Monday evening. The ladies' first prize was awarded to Mrs. Low Horth and the gentleman's prize was won by Mr. John Copithorne.

ARE YOU HELPING TO PROTECT OUR FORESTS?

The week of April 19th to 25th has been set aside throughout the Dominion of Canada as "Forest Protection Week."

We have had "Prune Week," and "Raisin Week," and "Soap Week," and every other kind of week; weeks which are designed primarily to boost sales. The advertising which proclaims these weeks must fundamentally have an idea behind it, or they would not continue. All of these, however, are designed to sell an article or a piece of merchandise, some product or other, so that some company, firm or association of growers should profit by bringing their merchandise before the public.

"Forest Protection Week" is selling to Canadians, Canadian wealth. Every citizen of Canada benefits if the idea of forest protection is sold. The forest wealth of British Columbia, which is estimated to be 50 per cent of the total timber wealth of Canada, is a crop which can be grown and replaced, providing fires are kept out. In this way it is unlike mining. When the wealth of a mine is taken out of the ground, nothing but a hole remains. If we keep fires out, it is obvious to every citizen of the province that timber which has been cut will grow again, and will keep on growing just so long as its arch enemy is kept out of the woods. Even in our day, operating companies have logged over timber which was considered too small 25 years ago to log at a profit. This sort of logging means continuity of employment to many thousands of families; indirectly it is probably the life stream of British Columbia's industries; for without raw materials the saw mills, shingle mills and pulp mills of this province would have to shut down and move to where the timber is growing, or is receiving better protection.

In 1924 there were 2,174 forest fires set, 86 per cent of which were directly attributable to human agency, or rather human carelessness. We do not suppose that there are many people in this province who would deliberately set fire to the forests, but unfortunately, neglect to take the necessary precautions has resulted too often in terrific destruction, and the timber is destroyed just as completely whether the fire is set deliberately or accidentally.

Do you think it would be too much for you to make a resolve to protect your own property, because the people of the province have an interest in every stick of timber that is cut, in the shape of royalty and other forms of taxation?

Follow the simple rules and you will always be safe in the woods:—

1.—Matches.—Be sure your match is out before you throw it away. Matches have heads, but they can't think. Do it for them.

2.—Tobacco.—Don't throw pipe ashes, cigar or cigarette stumps from a car into the inflammable material by the roadside. If you simply MUST get rid of these, it is less dangerous to drop them in the centre of the road.

3.—Making Camp.—Build a small camp-fire. Build it in the open, not against a tree or log. Scrape away the debris from all around it.

4.—Leaving Camp.—Never leave a camp-fire, even for short time, without quenching it with water or earth.

5.—Bonfires.—Never build bonfires in windy weather or where there is the slightest danger of their escaping from control. Don't make them larger than you need.

6.—Fighting Fires.—If you notice a small fire starting, try to put it out. Larger fires should be reported immediately.

7.—Spread the gospel of forest protection by your personal example.

PUBLIC LIBRARY REPORT

On account of the financial position of the association, it was decided at the last annual general meeting of the Sidney Public Library Association to ask the members to pay an additional fifty cents for the last year's membership and it was also decided that in future the membership fee should be $1.50 instead of $1 per annum.

In order to carry on the library and be in a position to renew the contract with the Victoria Public Library it is absolutely necessary that as many members as the library had last year, should before the end of this month, signify their willingness to join the library and pay the increased fee.

All members and residents who wish the library to continue are therefore asked to give in their names and subscriptions as early as possible to the librarian, Mrs. Hearn.

ITALIAN GOVERNMENT HELPS IN FILMING 'ETERNAL CITY'

In the official archives of the Italian government there is a print of "The Eternal City," the first National picture produced by George Fitzmaurice, which will be shown tomorrow and Saturday evenings at the Auditorium Theatre. It is being carefully guarded there, under orders of Premier Mussolini, for it possesses unusual value to him. He aided in its production.

Sounds unprecedented, doesn't it? But, nevertheless, it is a fact. Determining to film the story in the locale of Sir Hall Caine's novel, Mr. Fitzmaurice approached Mussolini for the purpose of enlisting his aid in getting the proper atmosphere.

Mussolini received him graciously, and granted permission to use, as locations, such picturesque and historic places, as the Coliseum, the Forum, the Roman Baths, the Old and New Appian Ways and many of the most important scene streets in Rome.

Mussolini ordered the entire army to place itself at the command of the production. For this use, battalions of soldiers were delegated both to work in the picture and to guard the players from interference. And to cap the climax, the premier, actually played a small part in the picture.

Mussolini showed keen interest in the making of "The Eternal City," and several times during the course of filming he showed up on location, watching the intricate details for hours at a stretch with as much interest as the average "movie fan."

When Fitzmaurice had completed his work he called on the premier to thank him and, in return for his co-operation, promised to send him the first print of the picture. This was done—and now if the prime minister of Italy wants to see himself on the screen as an actor all he has to do is to have his own print filmed.

Sir Hall Caine's story, with his consent, was modernized in order to make it more adaptable for screening purposes, and the action follows a line closely parallel to that which was responsible for Mussolini's rise in power.

The leading roles in the production are portrayed by a quintette of stars—Barbara La Marr, Lionel Barrymore, Richard Bennett, Bert Lytell and Montagu Love.

As Baron Bonelli, in "The Eternal City," Lionel Barrymore has one of the greatest roles of his career. The part is a startling contrast to his about the pursuit of women as thoroughly as he does the garnering of power.

Richard Bennett, one of the best loved American actors of the day, is cast as a lovable vagabond, who believes in the dignity of idleness, and bestirs himself only when the pangs of hunger become too insistent. He has as a travelling companion a 16-year-old boy, and there is deep affection between the two.

America's three ages: Rattle of musketry. Rattle of silver. Rattle of flivvers.

For bringing people together the flivver front seat has become a strong competitor to the Sunday school.

It will only be a question of time, says Miss Christie, until every pedestrian has an automobile or a harp.

A Swede has invented a car which will move sideways as readily as forward and backward. Let Sweden keep it! It's hard enough to dodge machines moving in two directions.

Citizen: "That's my car. A thief is just fixing a blowout." Policeman: "All right, I'll go over and arrest him."

Citizen: "Sh-h-h, wait until he gets the tire pumped up."

See where Billy Sunday says foolishness keeps many away from religion. We might add that automobiles help as well.

Even in the old days, says Sam Roberts, there were nicknames for Elizabeth, but "jit" wasn't one of them.

GROWING CELERY

Celery requires not only a good supply of water, but it must also have a liberal supply of plant food, which, say Messrs. McKillop and Cooper in Bulletin No. 43 of the Dominion Department of Agriculture, can be best applied by digging rotten manure into the bottom of the trench before planting the celery out in the garden.

As celery seed soon loses its vitality it is advisable to test it for germination before using. The seed should be sown thinly in the hotbed or in boxes as early as possible in the spring or can be started in the house in March or early in April. The seed should be barely covered with a sprinkling of soil, which should be pressed down. Thinning should be done when the plants are large enough to grasp with the fingers and the beds should be watered frequently, the earth being kept moist to the surface. The time for setting out in the garden is usually early in June. A trench about a foot

To the Editor Sidney and Islands Review:

Sir—I am pleased to see the interest taken in the suggestion of renaming Breeds Cross Road. As far as the promotion of this idea is concerned I believe it has only taken place in a friendly chat amongst neighbors living on this road. Possibly the blame is mine as I think I was the first to mention the idea. It was never done so in the attempt of detracting from any old-timer, but from the fact that many strangers have asked: "Why 'Breeds' Cross Road?" As far as the historical part is concerned I have learned that the gentleman farmer so named was noted for his hospitality in years gone by, when many naval officers were at Esquimalt. In those days when the rigs came out from Victoria the drivers were known to enquire "Which crossing to Breeds?" and the name apparently stuck. A name that has been suggested is "Ardmore Road," which includes all the vicinity where most of the old-timers formerly dwelt when this road was first built. Also, "Breeds" is far from being flattering to the Indian reservations. Possibly other interested readers will have suggestions to make.

Yours truly, WM. CHAS. CLARKE.

ANNUAL FLOWER SERVICE

The annual flower service will be held on Sunday evening next at St. Paul's Union church at 7.30 p.m.

This is always a very popular and enjoyable service and the members of the committee extend a very hearty invitation to the public to attend.

The church will be beautifully decorated with flowers and shrubs and there will be special music.

Mr. Cartwright, of Victoria, violinist, will play Handel's "Largo," and Mrs. Fawcett will sing "Leave it with Him."

deep and spade width, with well-rotted manure worked into the bottom and covered with soil, is required. The plants are set in the trench about six inches apart in a double or single row as preferred. Shade is necessary until the plants start growth, and the water, which should be used liberally, should be free from alkali. Shallow cultivation is desirable and thorough cultivation maintained until the celery is moulded up. When the plants have formed stalks of sufficient length it is time for blanching. Moulding up should not be done when the soil is really wet, as it would be likely to stick to the plants and discolor them.

As she finished she walked forward again, and again Linforth walked at her side. Dick, though his settled aim had given to him a manner and an aspect beyond his age, was for the same reason younger than his years in other ways. Very early in his youth he had come by a great and definite ambition, he had been inspired by it, he had welcomed and clung to it with the simplicity and whole-heartedness which are of the essence of youth. It was always new to him, however long he pondered over it; his joy in it was always fresh. He had never doubted either the true gold of the thing he desired, or his capacity ultimately to attain it. But he had ordered his life towards its attainment with the method of a far older man, examining each opportunity which came his way with always the one question in his mind—"Does it help?"—and leaving or using that opportunity according to the answer. Youth, however, was the truth of him. The inspiration, the freshness, the simplicity of outlook—these were the dominating elements in his character, and they were altogether compact of youth. He looked upon the world with expectant eyes and an unflinching faith. Nor did he go about to detect intrigues in men or deceptions in women. Violet's words, therefore, moved him not merely to tenderness, but to self-reproach.

"It is very kind of you to say that," he said, and he turned to her suddenly. "Because you mean it."

"It is true," said Violet, simply; and the next moment she was aware that some one very young was standing before her in that Indian garden beneath the starlit sky and faltering out statements as to his unworthiness. The statements were familiar to her ears, but there was this which was unfamiliar: they stirred her to passion.

She stepped back, throwing out a hand as if to keep him from her.

"Don't," she whispered. "Don't!" She spoke like one who is hurt. Amongst the feelings which had waked in her, dim and for the most part hardly understood, two at all events were clear. One a vague longing for something different from the banal path she daily trod, the other a poignant regret that she was as she was.

But Linforth caught the hand which she held out to thrust him off, and clasping it, drew her towards him.

"I love you," he said; and she answered him in desperation:

"But you don't know me."

"I know that I want you. I know that I am not fit for you." And Violet Oliver laughed harshly.

But Dick Linforth paid no attention to that laugh. His hesitation had gone. He found that for this occasion only he had the gift of tongues. There was nothing new and original in what he said. But, on the other hand, he said it over and over again, and the look upon his face and the tone of his voice were the things which mattered. At the opera it is the singer you listen to, and not the words of the song. So in this rose garden Violet Oliver listened to Dick Linforth rather than to what he said. There was audible in his voice from sentence to sentence, ringing through them, inspiring them, the reverence a young man's heart holds for the woman whom he loves.

"You ought to marry, not me, but some one better," she cried. "There is some one I know—in England—who—"

But Linforth would not listen. He laughed to scorn the notion that there could be any one better than Violet Oliver; and with each word he spoke he seemed to grow younger. It was as though a miracle had happened. He remained in her eyes what he really was, a man head and shoulders above her friends, and in fibro altogether different. Yet to her, and for her, he was young, and younger than the youngest. In spite of herself, the longing at her heart cried with a louder voice. She sought to still it.

"There is the Road," she cried. "That is first with you. That is what you really care for."

"No," he replied quietly. She had hoped to take him at a disadvantage. But he replied at once:

"No. I have thought that out. I do not separate you from the Road. I put neither first. It is true that there was a time when the Road was everything to me. But that was before I met you—do you remember?—in the inn at La Grave."

Violet Oliver looked curiously at Linforth—curiously and rather quickly. But it seemed that he at all events did not remember that he had not come alone down to La Grave.

"It isn't that I have come to care less for the Road," he went on. "Not by one jot. Rather, indeed, I care more. But I can't dissociate you from the Road. The Road's my life-work, but it will be the better done if it's done with your help. It will be done best of all if it's done for you."

Violet Oliver turned away quickly, and stood with her head averted. Ardently she longed to take him at his word. A glimpse of a great life was vouchsafed to her, such as she had not dreamt of. That some time she would marry again, she had not doubted. But always she had thought of her husband to be a man very rich, with no ambition but to please her, no work to do which would thwart her. And here was another life offered, a life upon a higher, a more difficult plane; but a life much more worth living. That she saw clearly enough. But out of her self-knowledge sprang the insistent question:

"Could I live it?"

There would be sacrifices to be made by her. Could she make them? Would not dissatisfaction with herself follow very quickly upon her marriage? Out of that dissatisfaction would there not grow disappointment in her husband? Would not bitterness spring up between them, and both their lives be marred?

Dick was still holding her hand.

"Let me see you," he said, drawing her towards him. "Let me see your face!"

She turned and showed it. There was a great trouble in her eyes, her voice was piteous as she spoke.

"Dick, I can't answer you. When I told you that I came here on purpose to meet you, that I wanted to see you again, it was true, all true. But oh, Dick, did I mean more?"

"How should I know?" said Dick, with a quiet laugh—a laugh of happiness.

"I suppose that I did. I wanted you to say just what you have said tonight. Yet now that you have said it—," she broke off with a cry. "Dick, I have met no one like you in my life. And I am very proud. Oh, Dick, my boy!" And she gave him her other hand. Tears glistened in her eyes.

"But I am not sure," she went on. "Now that you have spoken, I am not sure. It would be all so different from what my life has been, from what I thought it would be. Dick, you make me ashamed."

"Hush!" he said gently, as one might chide a child for talking nonsense. He put an arm about her, and she hid her face in his coat.

"Yes, that's the truth, Dick. You make me ashamed."

So she remained for a little while, and then she drew herself away.

"I will think and tell you, Dick," she said.

"Tell me now!"

"No, not yet. It's all your life and my life, you know, Dick. Give me a little while."

"I go away tomorrow."

"Tomorrow?" she cried.

"Yes, I go to Agra. I go to find my friend. I must go."

Violet started. Into her eyes there came a look of fear, and she was silent.

"The Prince?" she asked with a queer suspicion in her voice.

"Yes—Share AH," and Dick became perceptibly embarrassed. "He is not as friendly to us as he used to be. There is some trouble," he said lamely.

Violet looked him frankly in the face. It was not her habit to flinch. She read and understood his embarrassment. Yet her eyes met his quite steadily.

"I am afraid that I am the trouble," she said quietly. Dick did not deny the truth of what she said. On the other hand, he had as yet no thought or word of blame for her. There was more for her to tell. He waited to hear it.

"I tried to avoid him here in India, as I told you I want to do," she said. "I thought he was safe in China. I put neither first. It is true that there was a time when the Road was everything to me. But that was before I met you—do you remember?—in the inn at La Grave."

There he asked me to marry him."

"He asked you!" cried Linforth. "He must have been mad to think that such a thing was possible."

"He was very unhappy," Violet Oliver explained. "I told him that it was impossible. But he would not see. I am afraid that is the cause of his unkindness."

"Yes," said Dick. Then he was silent for a little while.

"But you are not to blame," he added at length, in a quiet but decisive voice; and he turned as though the subject were now closed.

Here and There

"Canada has a fine record of musical and artistic students who work under the auspices of the Royal College of Music," says Sir Hugh Allen, director of the London institution, who is making a tour of Canada in the interests of the College.

Canada exported 143,592,500 pounds of woodpulp during February, of which 133,891,000 went to the United States and to Great Britain, none. Our newsprint exports had a monetary value, in the same month of about seven and a half million dollars.

Two hundred and sixty thousand acres of land in central and northern Alberta will be settled by the British Land Settlement Corporation, it is announced. They are located north of Edmonton and from north of Vermilion to Wabunan, west of Edmonton.

Approximately 750,000 tourists, apart from delegates to conventions, visited Montreal last year by railway, steamer and automobile, according to an estimate compiled by the Montreal Tourist and Convention Bureau. It is anticipated that the influx for the current year will be even greater.

Geraldine Farrar, famous prima donna, who gave a recital of Carmen in Ottawa and Montreal recently, had a run in with the U.S. Customs at the border on her return to the United States. It was claimed that champagne and fine wines were found stored in the piano of her sumptuous private car, but the great singer says it was only near-beer.

England's great military spectacle, the Aldershot Military Searchlight and Torchlight Tattoo, which is held annually in aid of the Aldershot Command, Charities, is being presented this year from the 10th to the 20th of June and will, as usual, be contemporaneous with Ascot Week. The special feature is to be a Pageant of Battle which will recall some of the famous engagements of the British Army. Nearly 100,000 patrons attended last year.

To enable French-Canadian students to become acquainted with Western Canada, the Université de Montreal has organized a 28-day trip to the coast from Montreal next July. They will pass through Winnipeg, Regina, Moose Jaw, Calgary, Edmonton, Banff, Vancouver and Victoria, with stop-overs at Lake Louise, Field, Glacier, the Fraser Canyon and other beauty spots of the Canadian Rockies.

Student tours, operated by the Canadian Pacific in conjunction with McGill University, are to be extended this summer to include students from the British Isles. Heretofore, these tours have been restricted to scholars in other parts of Canada and in the United States. As Montreal is regarded as an ideal centre for the study of the French language, it is anticipated that the new project will attract many visitors to the Canadian metropolis.

The body of Dr. Sun Yat Sen, President of Southern China lay in state in a wonderful blue-tiled old Temple near the "Altar of Heaven," during the long drawn out ceremonies at Peking attendant upon his interment. Through the courtesy of the government the bier was viewed by a large party of Canadians and Americans touring the world on the Canadian Pacific S.S. "Empress of France." They were also invited to attend the final burial rites which, with a wealth of colorful Chinese ceremony took place later in the Western hills.

Up The Cariboo Road

By N. C. STEWART

The following interesting address was given before the Sidney Board of Trade last week, by Mr. N. C. Stewart:

The title of this paper "Up the Cariboo Road" may be slightly misleading—for it is really a description of that part of the Great Interior Plateau lying in Lillooet district. The surface of this plateau is of a rolling nature and broken by the trenches of the Fraser and its tributaries.

I have two reasons for choosing this district. Firstly, that probably by the end of the summer of 1926, the Transprovincial Highway will be completed through the Fraser Canyon, connecting the Coast with the roads in the Interior Plateau, the magnitude, magnificence, and accessibility of which are little known by the residents of the Coast. And, secondly, the district under discussion is served by the Pacific Great Eastern Railway, called by many who are ignorant of the resources of the country through which it passes—B.C.'s white elephant. A little advertising by our citizens, of these resources will no doubt help to start enterprises and bring in settlers, without which no railway can be made to pay.

The original Cariboo Road was constructed under the direction of the direction of the Royal Engineers between 1860 and 1870, the route being up the Fraser river from the head of navigation at Yale, through Lytton to Lillooet, thence crossing the river, going northeasterly over Pavilion mountain to Clinton, thence northerly to Quesnel and the Cariboo country proper. When the C.P.R. was completed a branch road joined Clinton with Ashcroft and the latter became the distributing point for the north. At the same time the road from Yale to Lytton was abandoned.

North from Clinton the P.G.E. and the Cariboo Road are never far apart, hence a description of the country along the road is also applicable to the railway. I will start at Ashcroft.

Ashcroft is dormant, compared with its bustling activity when it was the starting point for everyone going north, and the outlet for the products of the north. It may again awake, if the P.G.E. is connected with the C.N.R. or C.P.R. At present its small population depend on the local ranchers for their trade and on a small amount of traffic on the road in the summer. The town has quite a lot of Chinese, they operate the best hotels and restaurants—the Chinese menace.

After crossing the Thompson river at Ashcroft the road ascends the steep slopes of the valley, follows up the Bonaparte river for 22 miles, passing Cache Creek, where the road to Savona and Kamloops branches to the east and Hat Creek, which is the outlet of the road through the beautiful Marble Canyon from Pavilion and Lillooet to the west. All along the Bonaparte there are prosperous farms, irrigated by its water. The valley sides afford good grazing for stock, being quite open—for this is the dry belt.

Leaving the Bonaparte the road winds northerly through a narrow and picturesque valley with cultivated bottomlands and sparsely wooded sides. Three or four pretty little lakes are passed, the valley widens out, joining the valley of Clinton Creek. The town of Clinton appears in sight across the latter with the P.G.E. grade far up on the hillside north of the town.

Clinton, administrative centre of Lillooet district, is a town of about 250, with stores, hotels, restaurants, garages, etc., court house and government offices, church, schools and telephone and telegraph office. It is built on either side of the Cariboo Road and is a centre of a stock farming district. Here in the early days a flour mill was operated, milling the locally grown grain and shipping the flour by pack train into the Cariboo. The altitude of Clinton is 3,041 feet.

Before going further north, let us back track along the original Cariboo trail to Lillooet. This takes us southwesterly from Clinton through the fine farms of Cut-Off valley, near the head of which is Kelly Lake, where the road to the Big Bar country branches to the north. Pavilion mountain is then climbed by a switch back or two and a descent made to the top of the Fraser Canyon, the river itself being nearly 2,000 feet below. This climb is very steep—it is customary when descending, to tie a small tree behind for a brake, that is if you can find a tree on the top, most of them near the road have already disappeared. Pavilion is an Indian village established by them a long time before the white man came, and its present name was given it by the French-Canadians on a account of flags flown there when they reached it in fur trading days long before the discovery of gold in the Cariboo. From Pavilion the road is located on the benches of the left bank of the Fraser, crossing the river at the town of Lillooet.

Lillooet was a child of the gold stampede to the Fraser bars, being founded in 1879. It was not, as many believe, named by the Indians, the name being an alliteration of the name given to this part of the country by the French-Canadian voyageurs of the fur company, who called it the Land of L'Alouette (the lark). The town is built on a low bench overlooking the Fraser with a background of mountains, and has excellent orchards and gardens, carefully irrigated. The town has excellent hotels, good stores and business offices, a bank, churches, schools, a hospital and government office. The altitude of Lillooet is only 740 feet. The summit of Pavilion mountain is about 3,500.

Northward from Clinton the road follows the Clinton creek valley for a short distance, then makes a three-mile climb to the top of the Interior Plateau. From the top of this ascent to the 100-Mile House the road winds through this rolling plateau region, for mile after mile, open and grassy in places, in others clustered with lodge pole pine, ridges topped with stunted Douglas fir, with lake after lake both large and small. This description suits the district from the Fraser to the mountains west of the north branch of the Thompson river, in fact all the Interior Plateau except along the greater streams and depressions.

Every few miles along the road there are road houses, most of them still being in use. These are known by their mileage from Lillooet, such as the 74-Mile House, the 83, etc.

Just beyond the 59-Mile Road House the road skirts around a great rift in the earth, known as the Chasm, this chasm is some 900 feet deep, with perpendicular walls of vari-colored strata. Here is a great view, for far below through the distant pines a silvery creek shows occasionally and the far-flung rolling

Bringing the West to the East

1—Empress Hotel, Victoria, with dome of Houses of Parliament on right; 2—Airplane view of Lake Louise and Chateau; 3—Crossing the Wolverine Pass in the Rockies; 4—Trail Riders in the Yoho Valley.

No; the smallest part of the education of a Canadian Teacher should be a knowledge of the Dominion, derived from personal contact with its vast areas. When in addition the West is brought home to the East by a tour covering most of the former's points of interest, commercial, agricultural and scenic, then a very valuable addition to one's knowledge of one's own country has been consummated.

This is the object of the 21-day tour of Canada which is now being arranged by the Canadian Teacher's Federation in repetition of their very successful similar trip last summer. The party will leave Toronto west-bound July 20 and will be back in that city August 10. It will be under the personal direction of Professor Sinclair Laird, Dean of the School for Teachers, MacDonald College, Quebec. The journey out and return will be over Canadian Pacific Railway lines, motors and boats and stop-overs will be arranged at points of interest.

Starting from Toronto in the afternoon, the train passes through a land of beautiful lakes, the Muskoka region, reaching Sudbury and continuing through the big game district of Northern Ontario and skirting the shores of Lake Superior for many miles. Arriving at Port Arthur and Fort William, the twin cities where a day is spent in Winnipeg, the centre of the greatest grain marketing and transportation point in the Pacific. A day is spent in Regina and a day is reached the same day.

Then on to Calgary where the last of the prairie country is covered and the foot hills of the Rockies commence. Passing next day through the Gap, the gateway to the Rockies, where the roadway is hewn through the solid rock, Banff is reached on the first Saturday of the trip.

At this point the traveller enters fairland. Banff is the headquarters of the Rocky Mountains Park, a region of 2,761 square miles, covering rivers, lakes and mountain scenery of unsurpassed grandeur. The weekend is spent in this district. Drives and automobile trips here make a pleasant contrast with the train journey and the wonderful sights will live long in memory. There is Lake Louise, an exquisitely colored limpid mirror of glaciers and snow-crowned peaks and the brilliant blue of the sky with its argonian fleecy clouds. Mounts Stephen, Chocoma and Sir Donald rise into view as the Great Divide is crossed and the marvelous Yoho Park is traversed. Canyons, caves, valleys, deep gorges, passes twinkle past the train in its journey which is sometimes slowed up to admit of a more lasting impression. The scenery is so perfect that to avoid missing any the train does not travel at night and continues its journey at dawn. For 250 miles it passes through the Great Canyons of the Thompson and Fraser Rivers and the long day of fifteen hours is one unbroken pasture of delight. Vancouver is at last reached and a short but interesting boat trip is made across the straits of Georgia to Victoria with a panoramic view of the beautiful islands, bays and rocky headlands and the snow-capped mountains of the Coast ranges and the Olympics as a background.

The return journey takes us through the Cascade Mountains and the Kelowna Valley to Nelson, commercial centre of the Kootenay district. An overnight journey ends at Lake Windermere where after a trip to the Camp there is a motor run of 104 miles over the newly completed Banff-Windermere Highway through awe-inspiring scenery. Saturday, Sunday, Monday and Tuesday—four full days—are taken up with the above. Then commences the trip across the prairies to the head of the lakes which is reached via Edmonton and Saskatoon to Lake of the Woods district. A full 24 hours is spent among the sights of this wonderful Lake district and then the trip goes on to Fort William. From this point the journey is continued by boat through Lakes Superior and Huron to Port McNicoll where Toronto is reached four hours later and the trip completed.

It is difficult to conceive of a more healthy or a more diversified holiday than the one outlined above. In addition it brings home to the participant the glory of Canada in a way that is unequalled in so short a time. No one can take on a trip and not return from it bigger, wiser, more enamored of Canadian life, more convinced of the necessity for the next generation of Canadians.

BRAINS OF THE FARM

Time was when the hoe was the chief tool of the farmer, when about all a farmer needed was the strength of an ox and the endurance of a mule. Then brains didn't count. But nowadays a man with a weak back and a keen mind may beat out the fellow who is a demon for physical labor, and mainly because he rides on his wits rather than on brute strength. Working our bodies to the exhaustion point prevents our brains from functioning clearly. Farming effectively is impossible without an active mind. No two humans are alike. Standards for one man will not fit all other men. Each of us must adjust our working, resting, eating, sleeping and playing to the needs of our own bodies. A hard day's work for one farmer may be child's play for another; but a vacation needed by a tired man might be time wasted for one in his prime. Farm work provides infinite variety. Farm tasks done in the open air are wholesome and interesting. The monotony of factory work does not exist on the farm. Farming is creative; it requires a scientist's knowledge, a mechanic's skill and an artist's inspiration.—The Trail News.

HERE'S WHO BUILDS A TOWN

We see towns growing to be cities, and we see cities growing from small cities to be large ones. We know when we see this coming on, but we do not always know who is doing it. We have seen a few editors who claimed to be the inspiration for every forward movement that takes place in their towns or cities. We have seen other people, people of the town, who thought the editor was not doing his whole duty if he didn't do all by himself. But does the newspaper do it all? No, within itself it cannot do any of it. Well, then, if the newspaper doesn't do it, who does? The answer is known to no other so well as it is known to the newspaper. The answer is very simple, however. It is simply this: Those who advertise build the town.—The Trail News.

HAS FAITH IN SIDNEY

Mr. S. K. Halseth, who has just purchased Beach House, is to be commended for his ambitious plans of making the local beauty spot one of the finest on the Island. Mr. Halseth has been a resident of Sidney for a good number of years and it bids well for the future of our town to note an undertaking of this magnitude being promoted by one of our progressive business men.

The time used is Pacific Standard, for the 120th Meridian West. It is counted from 0 to 24 hours, from midnight to midnight. The figures for height serve to distinguish High Water from Low Water.

The Height is measured from the average level of the lowest Low Water in each month of the year.

UP THE CARIBOO ROAD

(Continued from Page Three) timbered plateau of the Bonaparte lies beyond as far as the eye can see. At the 70-Mile Road House, for years called "Boyd's," a branch road to the east leads to Green Lake, the North Bonaparte and the hinterland 40 miles beyond. Green Lake with its numerous islets and fine beaches is very pretty. A movie was taken there a couple of years ago — wild west—many of the cowboys of the neighborhood participating. This country is essentially a cattle country and is well settled. West from the 70 a road goes through the Soda Lake country to Canoe Creek and the Chilcotin west of the Fraser.

The highest point on the Cariboo road is located about a mile beyond the "S3," approximate altitude of 4,000 feet. The old S3 was one of the largest and finest of the road houses, being operated for a long time by that old pioneer, Mr. Dave Stoddard, who is now M.L.A. for a Cariboo riding. A year or two ago the old S3 was burnt to the ground. From the summit the road gradually descends through rolling pine country to the 100-Mile House on Little Bridge Creek — this creek flows easterly into Canim Lake, 26 miles distant. A good road leads through this more or less settled valley to the Canim Indian Reserve and the Lake. This lake, on account of its scenery and trout fishing, is well worth a visit.

There is a fine store and stopping place at the 100-Mile road winds up the open valley of Little Bridge creek, passing numerous stock ranches, over a low summit dotted with small lakes and then down to Lac La Hache, skirting the north-easterly shores of this deep lake for 13 miles, thence down the San Jose valley to the 150-Mile House. Before the coming of the P.G.E. the 150-Mile was one of the most important posts on the road, for from it roads radiated to the west—away to the Chilcotin, to the north to Quesnel and Barkerville, to the northeast to Harper's Camp, centre of hydraulic mining operations, and to Timothy Mountain where mineral claims were held and southwest to the Mission and the Alkali Lake and Springhouse Prairie cattle country. Other than the road house it contained the government administrative offices, stores, banks, schools, etc., but now nearly everything has been moved to town of Williams Lake.

Williams Lake is situated on low benches in a wide valley about two miles from the north end of the lake from which its name was derived. It is a divisional point on the P.G.E. and is now well established, having two banks, fine stores and hotels, schools, government offices, a hospital—and a government vendors store. It is the shipping point for large stock ranches located along the Fraser and Chilcotin rivers. The altitude of Williams Lake is 1844 feet.

The Chilcotin is probably the finest stock-raising district of British Columbia. If you are ever up in the Interior do not fail to drive through it, for the roads are good, the stopping places excellent and the ever-changing scenery magnificent. After climbing over the mountain between Williams Lake and the Fraser the route gradually descends along cultivated benches to the Chimney Creek bridge, across the Fraser, thence climbing about 2,000 feet in a couple of miles to a broad bench land of open rolling prairie, several miles in width, at the far edge of which is Beecher's Hotel, a large frame structure—Risko Creek post office, then on through pine-clad stretches to Hanceville, where the big "Tretheway" ranch is located, now owned by an Australian by the name of Spencer. At Hanceville the white water of the Chilcotin river is seen for the first time. From Hanceville the road follows up the Chilcotin for many miles and branch roads lead to the Gang Ranch and the Big Creek cattle country and the Nemata trail goes southwest across the great plateau to Taseko and Chilco lakes nestling in the easterly slopes of the Coast Range. Chilco lake is a superb stretch of water 50 miles long, bordered by towering mountains whose highest peaks reach an altitude of 9,000 to 10,000 feet. This country may well be the objective for mountaineers for there are many unnamed peaks to climb, rivaling the Rockies in grandeur and unknown glaciers to explore.

Now for the resources: The first white men to explore this region were the fur traders. There is still quite a lot of fur taken out, both by the Indians and whites. The Indian women make very fine gloves and moccasins from buckskin, and they are also proficient in weaving grass baskets, cleverly designed and ornamented.

After the fur traders came the placer miners, tracing the gold up the Fraser, panning the bars, and finally discovering Williams Creek at Barkerville, where from 25 to 30 million dollars of gold was taken from two and a half miles of its bed. To date nearly 50 million dollars of placer gold has been taken out of the Cariboo and the district is still producing. Along the Quesnel river alone, the gravels are estimated to contain from 100 to 500 million dollars of gold.

A great variety of minerals of economic importance have been found in the Interior Plateau since the great gold discoveries: Iron—at Kelly Lake and near the upper end of Taseko Lake, this latter deposit contains about 700,000 tons of good limonite, but is too far from transportation at present. Chromite Ores—on the Bonaparte south of Clinton. Chromites are largely used in preparing pigments, dyeing, tanning and as oxidising agents.

Molybdenum—on Timothy Mountain, 30 miles northeast of Lac La Hache, and another deposit south of Lillooet. This mineral was sought during the war, and is used in the tool-making industry.

Nickel—in an outcrop of garnetite south of Clinton. Antimony and Copper—near Chilco Lake.

Manganese—found in the Marble Mountains 10 miles from Clinton —also used in the steel industry. Mica—located in large crystals six to 12 inches long, in the mountains east of Canim Lake. This is a very valuable mineral at the present time.

Hydro-magnesite—deposits of economic importance are found in several places, near Clinton, Kelly Lake, Meadow Lake, which is 14 miles west of the Chasm, at Lac La Hache and in the Bridge River district. The Meadow Lake deposit is estimated at 114,000 tons. Magnesite and its products are used in the manufacture of carbon dioxide, in the wood pulp industry, as a lining for furnaces, etc. The metal magnesium forms an alloy with aluminum, and the powdered metal is used for flares.

Epsomite or Epsom Salts—In a lake a mile south of Clinton pure epsom salts are found. These crystallize a few inches below the surface of the water and harvested and is now well established, having much the same as ice, two million pounds were shipped from this lake schools, government offices, a hospital—and a government vendors store.

Sodium carbonate, sal soda, or common washing soda — Soda is found chemically pure in a series of lakes near the 70-Mile House. I estimated 40,000 tons in one lake. When these lakes dry up in the fall the soda crystallizes, completely covering the bed of the lake, giving the appearance of a sheet of ice. Men adze out the soda, being careful not get any mud from the lake bottom, sack it, then it is ready for shipping. However the market is limited, although the compound was used for many things. It is chemically made as a by-product in the salt industry. Sodium compounds are used in the manufacture of glass, soap, matches, munitions, in photography, tanning, medicines, and in nearly all chemical industries.

Besides the above-mentioned minerals there are deposits of gypsum, diatomaceous earth, fire clays, mineral pigments, talc, and coal, the latter seemingly not of much commercial value. We also find indications of precious stones in the microscopic diamonds associated with the chromites of the Clinton district, and olivene in the mineralized outcrops of Timothy Mountain. Platinum and other rare minerals of the platinum group are found along with the placer gold.

From this glance at its mineral indications, it is easy to foretell that this district will in time supply the mineral products for a great number and variety of manufacturing enterprises.

With the miners came also those who supplied them with the necessities of life—the farmers and ranchers, settling in the most favorable spots, so that today over 50,000 head of stock are ranged in the district. The largest of the ranches is the Gang, on the right bank of the Fraser, below the mouth of the Chilcotin river. The Gang Ranch runs about 4,000 head. The B.C. Cattle Company range over 1,000 at their Canoe Creek ranch, which is on the left bank of the Fraser, opposite the Gang ranch. Other large ranches are the R. C. Cotton at Risko Creek, the Spencer ranch at Hanceville, Graham's at Alexis Creek, the Empire Valley, which is south of the Gang Ranch; Wynne Johnston at Alkali Lake, and the Onward, Enterprise, and the Cariboo Trading Company's ranches in the San Jose valley. There are also one or two sheep ranches with over 1,000 head. Previous to the completion of the P.G.E. all stock had to be driven down the Cariboo Road to Ashcroft for shipping, some job, say from Alexis Creek, a distance of 220 miles.

The history of other parts of this continent shows that large holdings for cattle-raising gradually disappear, other forms of agriculture which admit of denser population taking its place. I think that this will happen in this district, especially along the rivers, where the benches are very productive under irrigation. Did you know that canteloup, water-melons, grapes and peaches are grown along the Fraser?

The Climate—The climate is quite in contrast with that at the Coast. The westerly winds of the Pacific striking the cooler slopes of the Coast Range are forced to discharge their moisture and the Interior Plateau in lee of the Coast mountains receives little precipitation, roughly about 15 inches a year, part in snow, compared with 40 to 120 inches along the Coast. The temperatures of the Interior Plateau also show extremes in contrast, being roughly an annual mean of 45 degrees and varying from 45 below zero to over 100 above. The bracing air of these uplands, laden with the ozone of the pines, combined with days of bright sunshine, with little wind, and cool nights, makes this the most healthy and enjoyable climate of any in our province—except Sidney's.

This is but a glimpse of part of the Interior of the province, but I hope it to be sufficient to create in you greater interest in its potentialities, so that hence forth you may look on our great investments in roads and railways as investments with at least possibilities.

12 Years Ago

From the Sidney and Islands Review of April 25, 1913.

Mrs. (Capt.) T. Thompson spent the end of last week in Sidney on a visit to her mother, Mrs. Sam Brethour.

The Sidney Amateur Dramatic Club will present on May 9th, in Berquist Hall, the well-known three act comedy, "The Private Secretary," by Charles Hawtrey. Mr. Berquist is going the limit in arranging the hall in a manner that will no doubt be greatly appreciated by the spectators. Mrs. Tester, who is managing the affair, has arranged to have about 150 reserved seats. The North Saanich orchestra has kindly consented to entertain between acts, under the leadership of Mr. H. Musgrave.

Royal Canadian Militia will make their camp in Sidney. Four regiments, comprising 1,000 men, will hold their annual outing on the property of Mr. John Brethour, close to the town. Last Friday Col. Roy, commanding the B.C. military district, accompanied by Lt.-Col. Hall, came to Sidney and selected a site for the summer camp of the militia. The spot chosen is the open grass land lying between Mr. John Brethour's house and the English church. This is a most admirable locality for the purpose. Col. Roy will be in supreme command and he will be assisted by a large headquarters staff. The camp will open June 26 and will last one week.

The Sidney Athletic Association is getting busy in preparation for the coming season. The following gentlemen have been elected a baseball committee: T. Converse, manager; F. J. Pfister, captain, and A. McConnell, vice-captain. The playing field is being rolled and levelled and lacrosse and baseball practise will start very soon.

The social and formal opening of the new school at Deep Cove took place on Wednesday night at 8 o'clock. Mrs. P. N. Tester was elected to the chair. Thanks are due the following for making this an enjoyable evening: Mr. Rufus Horth and family, Mr. and Mrs. Moses, Mr. and Mrs. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Simpson, Mr. and Mrs. Lowe, F. Horth, H. A. McKillop, O. G. Clark and P. N. Tester, as well as the ladies and gentlemen taking part in the program, and Mr. H. Musgrave, Miss Simister and Mrs. P. N. Tester for supplying music for the dance.

Motor cars are "an evidence" now, and the fight for and against seems over and petitions to the attorney-general against are a thing of the past.

W. Taylor has got his hotel license and begun building operations and hopes to have his $15,000 house in full going order before the summer holidays.

The day of days for one of our ambitious young bachelors dawned on Tuesday, the 22nd, when the wedding march, orange blossoms and congratulations will be in evidence, when Miss Daisy Lang and Mr. Basil Cartwright will be made one in St. Mark's church.

The Salt Spring Island Dramatic Association are giving an entertainment at the Mahon Hall on the 23rd and 24th. The bill includes "The Monday Spinner," followed by the farce "The Area Belle." The known ability of the performers and the fact that the proceeds are to go towards the erection of a hospital for the island should insure success.

SIDNEY SOCIAL CLUB

The regular weekly meeting of the Sidney Social Club took place last night in Matthews' hall. There was a good attendance and military 500 was played.

The winter season will close next Wednesday evening with an open night to take place in Matthews' Hall, at which a piano will be given away as tombola prize.

JOLLY HOUSE PARTY

Miss Jean McNaught entertained a number of her friends on Monday evening. Games and contests were enjoyed and caused much laughter and amusement. "Walking the Rope" was the feature of the evening, three prize being awarded to Miss Phyllis Whiting. Other contests were won by Mrs. Hughes and Miss Simister. Refreshments were served at 11 o'clock. Those present were: Mrs. McNaught, Mrs. Hughes, Mrs. Mitchell, Mrs. McIntyre, the Misses Margaret Cochran, Florence Houldsworth, Frances Christie, Iris Goddard, Rose Matthews, Winnifred Patti, Margaret, Nancy, Patty and Grace Simister, Ethel and Phyllis Whiting and Miss Jean McNaught.

NOTES BY THE WAY

By OBSERVER

Experiments are to be continued this year at the Experimental Farm in the growing of tobacco. While many people are of the opinion that tobacco cannot be cultivated extensively on Vancouver Island, others are of the contra opinion. While the climate is not as favorable to tobacco growing as parts of Ontario and Quebec, some varieties may be found that will grow successfully here. Tobacco culture in parts of Quebec is a paying proposition, and furnishes occupation for the grower during both summer and winter. In the spring and summer he is busy in the hot beds and fields, and in the fall and winter he is busy curing and stemming his product. While the growing of tobacco is an art, the curing is a process during which the greatest care must be taken, especially with the varieties used in making cigars. Most of our fine cigars are made of Quebec leaf, and many of our leading factories have humidors in the tobacco district, where they cure and stem their own stock. If this crop can be successfully grown on Vancouver Island, it will furnish a lot of employment, especially if it can be kept out of the hands of the Oriental.

April 19 to 25 has been proclaimed as "Save the Forest Week." A royal proclamation has been issued by His Excellency the Governor-General which deals with the importance of the forests and indicates lines to be followed by all citizens in carrying out their part in the nationwide effort at fire prevention. The proclamation sets out that the forest industries in Canada, next to agriculture, constitutes the most important source of the Dominion's national income, it also further states that the experience of all forest authorities has demonstrated that the forest fire problem can only be solved with the full sympathy, assistance, and active support of the people, and the exercise of prudence and carefulness should reduce the timber losses to small proportions. During the year 1924 it was found that proceeding from the east there was a gradual heightening of the fire hazard through the west. Manitoba had a normal season. In Saskatchewan fairly heavy fire losses were sustained. In Alberta, especially north of Edmonton, extreme conditions existed until near the end of July. In the Dominion railway belt of B.C. the season was one of severe hazard.

The importance of oil and its by-products as fuel is always to the fore. The Dominion government has been carrying on investigations during the past few years with reference to the shale deposits in Canada. The deposits are of value, especially those in Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, and if mining operations could be carried out economically these shales will eventually constitute the basis of a large and lucrative industry. This, in the case of Nova Scotia will only be reviving an old industry, as for many years shales were mined and shipped, principally to Scotland, for refining.

In 1923 there were 333 plants in Canada manufacturing products from metals other than iron and steel. They included 11 plants producing aluminum and aluminum wares, 81 brass and copper products, 20 in the white metal trade, 97 producing precious metal products, 108 plants making electrical goods, and 16 other plants using non-ferrous metals of a miscellaneous nature.

Prince Edward Island, although small in size, is one of the principal fishing districts of the Dominion. The 1924 yield amounted to $1,201,772, a decrease of $553,298 from the preceding year. This is explained by the lower lobster pack, as only 28,814 cases were packed. The principal fish products are cod, haddock, herring, hake, cusk, mackerel, smelts, clams, quahaugs, clams and oysters. Most of these are exported fresh, although three clam canneries and one fish-curing establishment operated during the year.

A writer in a Victoria daily newspaper complains that very little space was taken up in eastern daily newspapers describing the victory of the Victoria professional hockeyists' win of the world's championship, and lots of space was devoted to the doings of the amateur hockey players. This writer has yet to learn that in eastern Canada professional hockey players have not a great many supporters, but that good amateur hockey has a good following. The filling of the pocketbooks of the professional players and their owners is a minor affair against the winning of a game by the boys from their own home town. Amateur sports of all kinds are encouraged, and even the smallest of towns have their hockey, baseball, and football leagues, as well as clubs for tennis, croquet, lacrosse, and even quito-pitching. In many cases these games are acquired in boy and girlhood, and the interest is continued throughout the man and womanhood, but in all cases it is business first and sport is looked upon as a recreation and a method to drive dull care away.
